

Live Room — Consultant FAQ

What is it?

A ~15-minute live game. The audience relives six real market crises on their phones and sees, together, why staying invested wins.

What does it teach?

Time in the market beats timing it — felt, not lectured. It surfaces the fear, FOMO and regret that push investors to sell at the worst moment.

What do players need?

A phone with a browser. They scan a QR and pick a nickname — no app, no login, nothing to install.

Which networks work?

Any, including cellular — the QR sends phones to the hosted site. (If you instead host from a company laptop, phones must share its network.)

What data is collected?

A self-chosen nickname and Buy/Hold/Sell votes only. No emails, no accounts, no PII. Rooms are throwaway.

Is the market data real?

Yes — real monthly total returns for 2020–2025 (a broad U.S. equity index + the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate), plus real crises 1973–2018 in the explorer.

Is it product-specific?

The Live edition is product-agnostic. A separate Sales edition adds the American Balanced Fund for solo, advisor-led use.

How do I run it?

Open the hosted link on the big screen → “Host a live room” → set one amount → audience scans → you pace the six moments. Checks and the finish run themselves.

The “starting split”?

Each player chooses how much of their money starts invested vs. in cash — so being under-invested shows up as a real cost.

The “cash bonus”?

Mid-game a windfall lands — often at the scariest moment. Deploy it or freeze? The dilemma real investors face with new money.

The “performance checks”?

Twice mid-game a live leaderboard shows who's ahead — the friendly FOMO that keeps the room leaning in.

The “crisis explorer”?

After their own result, players flip through 1973 · 1987 · 2000 · 2008 — the shape barely changes; staying invested keeps winning.

If a phone can't join?

The screen shows a clear reason (usually a corporate-network block) with fixes — it never just hangs. Test one phone before the event.

Can I use it with clients?

Not yet. Internal / pre-approval only — data verification and compliance/brand sign-off must be complete before any client-facing use.

KEY TALKING POINT

“Investors don't fail at math — they fail at emotion. This gives clients a shared, visceral reason that discipline (and a professional in their corner) matters.”

BEFORE YOU PRESENT

Confirm the compliance/brand sign-off is done and you're hosting the current version from the official link.
